

ABSTRACT

A laminated tube has an exceedingly high permeation inhibiting ability unparalleled by conventional laminated tubes. The laminated tube is a laminated structure consisting of a plurality of thermoplastic resin layers. The two or more layers among the plurality of layers are low-permeability layers formed respectively of different low-permeability resins.